Summary

The profession of Deaning is not for the faint of heart. Every Dean's job description is going to vary from experience and location, but the core requirement necessary for successfully serving as a Dean and living to tell the tale is openness. Being open to what serving teenagers might mean. Being open to listen to the tenth plus tale of woe that day and still sympathize. Being open to being called from your bed yet again because someone is making poor choices. Being open to God asking you to give grace when it feels like you have no more to give. Deaning is ministry.

This ministry requires:

- Flexibility
- Punctuality
- Basic clerical skills (Microsoft)
- Interpersonal skills
- A willingness to manage the unexpected
- General good health/mobility
- Open and visible relationship with Jesus
- Open support of Seventh Day Adventist beliefs/practices
- Open support of UCA policies and procedures

Daily Duties could include, but are not limited to:

- Communicating and responding to parent needs and questions
- Substitute teaching and/or lunch supervisions as assigned by Administration
- Weekly meetings with Dorm and general staff
- Occasional Worship
- Continued Dormitory upkeep and functions

- Duties as assigned by Head and Assistant Head Deans and Administration
- Grace and understanding with undeveloped brains and emotions
- Comfortable with holding a line

This position will stretch you in ways that will surprise you. You will feel tired and drained at times, but the potential impact you will have on the lives and relationships, personal and spiritual, that your students are developing is monumental.
